Carved out in sandstone, a 1.5 metre-high border sign called the "main landmark" of the 19th century, which showed the border between Austria/the Austrian Empire (its section cutting across the Cieszyn Silesia) and the Kingdom of Prussia. Emblems of the bordering countries are placed at the top on the opposite sides: a crown—the emblem of Austria, and an eagle—the emblem of Prussia. Below the symbols is the number of this landmark: IX. This border stone is one of more than a dozen others surviving along the old border. The border was also marked with smaller signs and letters: Ö = Austria and P = Prussia.

A border bent north of a fish pond, 2.5 km north of the town Strumień in the Cieszyn county, Silesian Province. Co-ordinates: N: 49°56'9.0" E: 18°45'4.6"
